

The Morality of New Zealand Leaders

Kiwis like to be known as honest people, but do NZ leaders care about genocide - an egregious crime against humanity witnessed by the ANZACs?

Foreign Minister Murray McCully (Morality - 0/10)

UN Security Council, 8 July 2015:

"We as a Council have a duty to remember the past in order that we do everything possible to avoid history repeating..."

Hypocrisy! NZ didn't have the morality to recognise the Armenian genocide, nor to mark the Armenian genocide centenary on 24 April 2015, unlike our allies USA, UK, Canada and France!

Prime Minister John Key (Morality - 1/10)

NZ government (11 December 2014):

"The NZ government considers it important that historical injustices – including those perpetrated against the Armenian people by the Ottoman Empire – be acknowledged appropriately..."

Shameful hypocrisy - NZ refuses to recognise the Armenian genocide, unlike 29 nations – including Ottoman allies Austria and Germany, our Gallipoli allies Canada, France, Russia, and his Holiness the Pope!

The Green Party (Morality - 10/10)

Are the Greens the only party with the courage to tell the truth?

24 April 2015: "Greens call for remembrance of the Armenian genocide"

Te Ururoa Flavell (Morality - 3/10)

22 April 2015: "It is important that we do not think of the many tragedies which occurred during this period in isolation..."

How disappointing, a party of a people subject to invasion regards the systematic extermination of millions of indigenous Christians by Turks for eight centuries and the theft of property as just a 'WWI tragedy'!

Phil Goff (Morality - 9/10)

A politician with morality, not afraid to challenge the Minister of Foreign Affairs!
17 October 2014: "...why we have not joined with other countries and formally recognised it?"

Andrew Little (Morality - 1/10)

David Shearer (0/10)

Is this the view of 'caring humanitarians' who want the world to learn from the past?

16 October 2015: "This is an issue, but it is historical, and with everything else going on in the world currently, it is not a high priority..."
